The LION of 1953

A Squirrel's Eye View of
Red Lion High School
Red Lion, Pennsylvania

Foreword

Since Red Lion's beautiful park, inhabited by scores of gray squirrels, is just an acorn's throw from our alma mater, we have had many delightful experiences with our furry friends during our high school careers. And so, we have invited these rambunctious rodents to leave their window-sill and tree top perches to join the members of the staff as they record the goings-on inside Red Lion High School for the 1952-53 term.

Thus the thought for the 1953 Lion. May the venture prove profitable to squirrels and staff . . . and enjoyable to readers.

Administration

Outdoor classes of April and May, along with the parking lot on the edge of the park, where the teachers' cars are favorite spots for the squirrels' antics, already have made the squirrels familiar with many members of the faculty at Red Lion. Our friendly advisors and helpers do a wonderful job in teaching and overseeing our school, even when schedule problems, uninspired students and numerous activities would drive most of us "squirrely." The job of developing the minds of some eight hundred teen-agers is a task which takes both skill and patience.

Second Our Mentors...

MR. DAN B. KULP, B.S., M.A., has a busy schedule with his duties as supervising principal and the extra time devoted to the local civic affairs.

The ADMINISTRATION people often find the day starting early and ending long after the last bus has chugged down the hill. The job of settling problems, teaching and guiding teenagers, keeps everyone stepping and more-than-earning his salary. Ordinary office work plus management is only a small part of a job which includes ordering supplies, answering questions, locating equipment and keeping track of all the students and their achievements. The most important task of all, however, is broadening the minds and directing the activities of the students for the betterment of our school and their lives.

The Red Lion Board of Education—Mr. Charles Horn, Mr. Paul Raub, Dr. Woodrow Dellinger, Mr. Thomas Holtzinger, Mr. Penrose Heindel, Mr. David R. Fink and Mr. C. C. Rexroth.

INSET: Mr. Earl Hartman.

.... First Our Friends

The opening of school in September brought students to the office for the usual requests.

MR. EDGAR C. MOORE, B.S., high school principal, through his many faithful years at Red Lion, has learned to know almost everyone in Red Lion and the nearby boroughs and townships.

Mrs. Jeannette Trout and Miss Norma Herbst, both alumnae of Red Lion High, carry on the endless secretarial tasks of the school.

Miss Mary Farling, B.A., M Ed, dean of girls and English instructor, joins in the Christmas spirit as she decorates her miniature tree.

"Back in the room, sonny." It's noon hour hall duty for Mr. Charles Nitchkey, B.S., M.Ed., director of athletics and boys' guidance counsellor

Choosing a Future...

Varied are the phases of guidance . . . student problems referred to counsellors for words of wisdom . . . interests and qualifications studied for choice of vocations . . . movies shown on different jobs. Too, there are the homeroom periods . . . hot air mixed with serious thinking . . . programs aimed at better understanding of the school . . . sharing of ideas on pre-graduation musts and post-graduation plans.

Pennsylvania Week saw R. L. H. S. as a guinea pig in a student exchange program . . . five happy days in the mining section of Pennsylvania . . . living in homes of students who were spending the week in Red Lion . . . result—many new friends and a bond of friendship between the two schools.

... New Friendships

Red Lion students "bat the breeze" with their Portage hosts before the bell sounds for classes.

The entire student body turns out to give the guests a warm send-off as their week at Red Lion comes to an end.

Work in the COLLEGE PREPARATORY curriculum is designed primarily for the students who have the urge to go into advanced and detailed study in certain fields. Versatile and brain-teasing subjects, such as Latin, French, chemistry, biology, physics, algebra and geometry, to say nothing of those standbys--literature and social studies--provide the college-bound with the extra credits and know-how they will need. These students rack their brains all through their high school years for the good marks they hope will send them to their favorite school. When they receive their college entrance blanks and realize they can meet requirements, they feel that the hard work and extra hours have paid off.

That quizzical expression of Mr. Clair A. Fritts, B.S., M.Ed., is usually the signal for a friendly argument in P.O.D.

Accent on College...

Mr. Paul I. Hangen, B.A., could be gathering current information for his civics classes . . . or reading the funnies.

Another student voices her opinion on the presidential election in the campaign assembly sponsored by the social studies classes.

Mrs. Hilda Jackowick, B.A., teaches classes of tenth and twelfth grade English, also has great enthusiasm for dramatics.

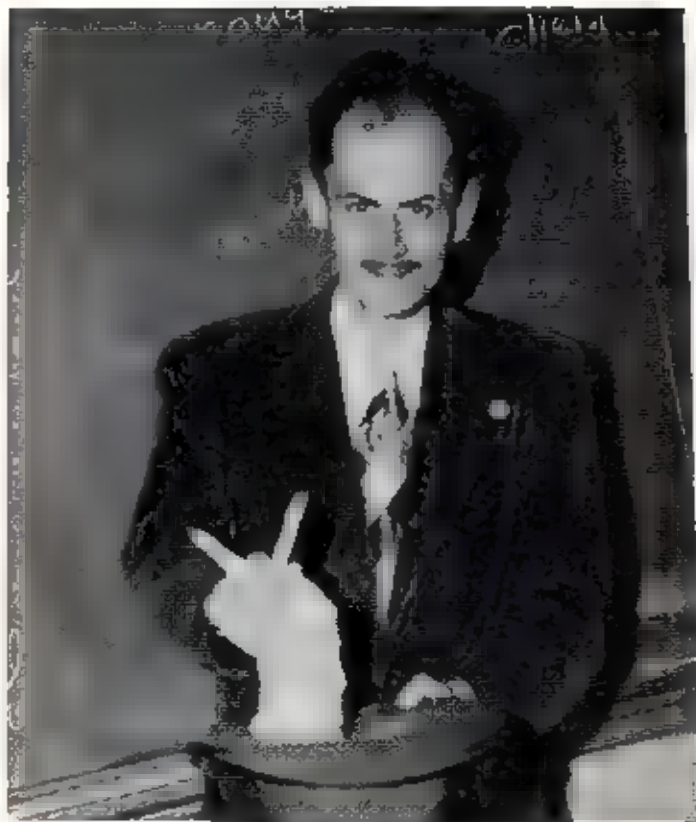

Miss Marie Keeports, B.A., M.A., American Lit authority, checks her state register for its end-of-the-month visit to the office.

...and Campus Life...

Watering the flower that died anyhow is Miss Helen Clevenger, B.A., M.A., Latin instructor.

It's the holiday season and the 9 G's seem to enjoy singing the Latin version of "Jingle Bells."

Mr. Francis Miller, B.A., French and English teacher, is kept busy with his hobby of magic. Here he performs one of his favorite stunts

These young Shakespearean actors seem to take pleasure in their roles as conspirators. Poor Caesar!

... Today, Shakespeare and Algebra ...

Miss Naomi Myers, B.S., explains the technique of verb conjugation to one of her six freshman English sections.

Those papers must be very good, or else Harold's in one of his entertaining moods

A science class under the direction of Mr. Myers takes to the outdoors.

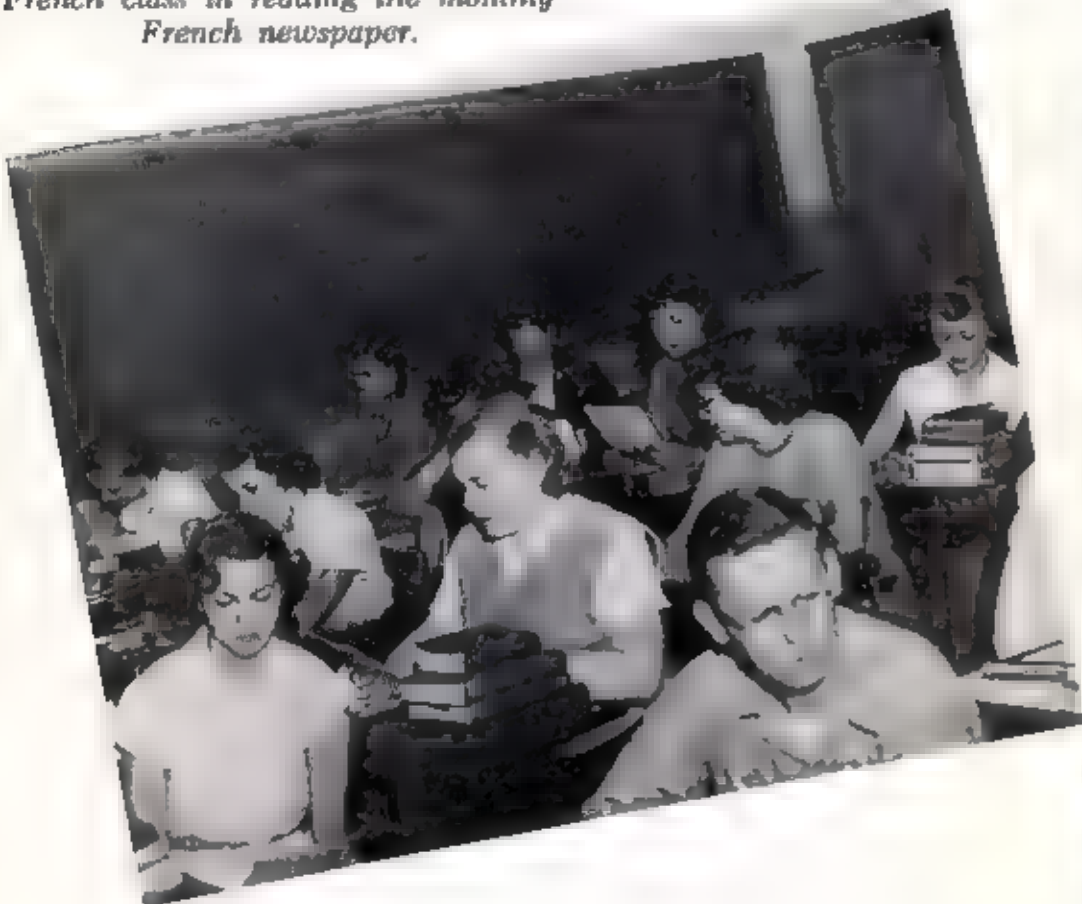

Mr. Daniel E. Myers, B.A., M.A., general science and physics teacher, in one of his weekly study halls. He also directs the boys' Music Club.

D. E. Myers

... Tomorrow, Plato and Calculus...

Portage visitors join a twelfth grade French class in reading the monthly French newspaper.

Miss Bessie V. Reiver, B.A., M.S., corrects the math homework papers. Miss Reiver is in charge of school allied finance, and has her own special math problems from time to time.

Mr. N. Eugene Shoemaker, B.S., M.Ed., our biologist, gets his chow with the rest of the study hall.

Mr. Harold Myers, B.S., M.Ed., gives out with tips in track as well as history

David Stitler takes the floor in 12E English round table discussion.

Varied Schedule...

For those with uncertain aims, the GENERAL curriculum offers the way out. A somewhat versatile schedule permits students to skim the surface of required subjects and spend more time on variables. As a result these jacks-of-all-trades earn their diplomas without qualifying for particular jobs or future study. If they happen to have a change of plans after commencement, those who graduate from this curriculum sometimes learn the hard way that most colleges mean what they say about entrance requirements.

Away from his math class, Mr. John Beckley, A.B., takes his weekly stint at library duty.

Miss Keepert's English class uses tape recorder in giving book reports.

Mr. Richard Baldwin, B.A., M.A., is an ardent dramatics enthusiast as well as English and history teacher.

Richard H. Baldwin

An eleventh grade physics group works out problems at the lab tables. Rosy seems interested elsewhere.

...for Citizens...

Mrs. Elesta Foust, B.A., gives time to publicity stunts in the school besides her many math classes.

Mr. David Zeigler, B.A., junior high basketball coach, checks the homework of his algebra and plane classes.

Mr. Freeland Shaffer, B.S., gives his usual smile to his bewildered students as he once again explains the chemistry problem.

Mr. William Minnich, B.S., new at Red Lion this year, teaches English and history, also assists the coach with the football team.

These 11A plane students don't seem at all perturbed by their assignment.

... Maps and Manuals

Mr. James Adams, B.S., M.S., geography teacher, also serves as advisor to the student council

James W. Adams

Mr. Henry E. Givler, B.S., has the distinction of starting the agriculture course in R. L. H. S.

The AGRICULTURAL curriculum is designed for boys, with or without green thumbs, who wish to learn improved methods of farming. Greeting it with enthusiasm, the fellows from the rural areas now find a course that suits them to a "T". It is divided into two departments and deals not only with book farming and technical data, but includes a workshop in which the boys learn to use and repair farm implements and machinery. Besides the fact that the workshop door is too small to admit any large machinery, and that the extent of the crop raising in school has been limited to flower pots and window boxes, the ag classes are proving very worthwhile.

Proper milk testing is the center of interest for this freshman group.

Scientific Farming

Hog feeders to milking stools is the range of the many useful items turned out by students in shop periods like this one.

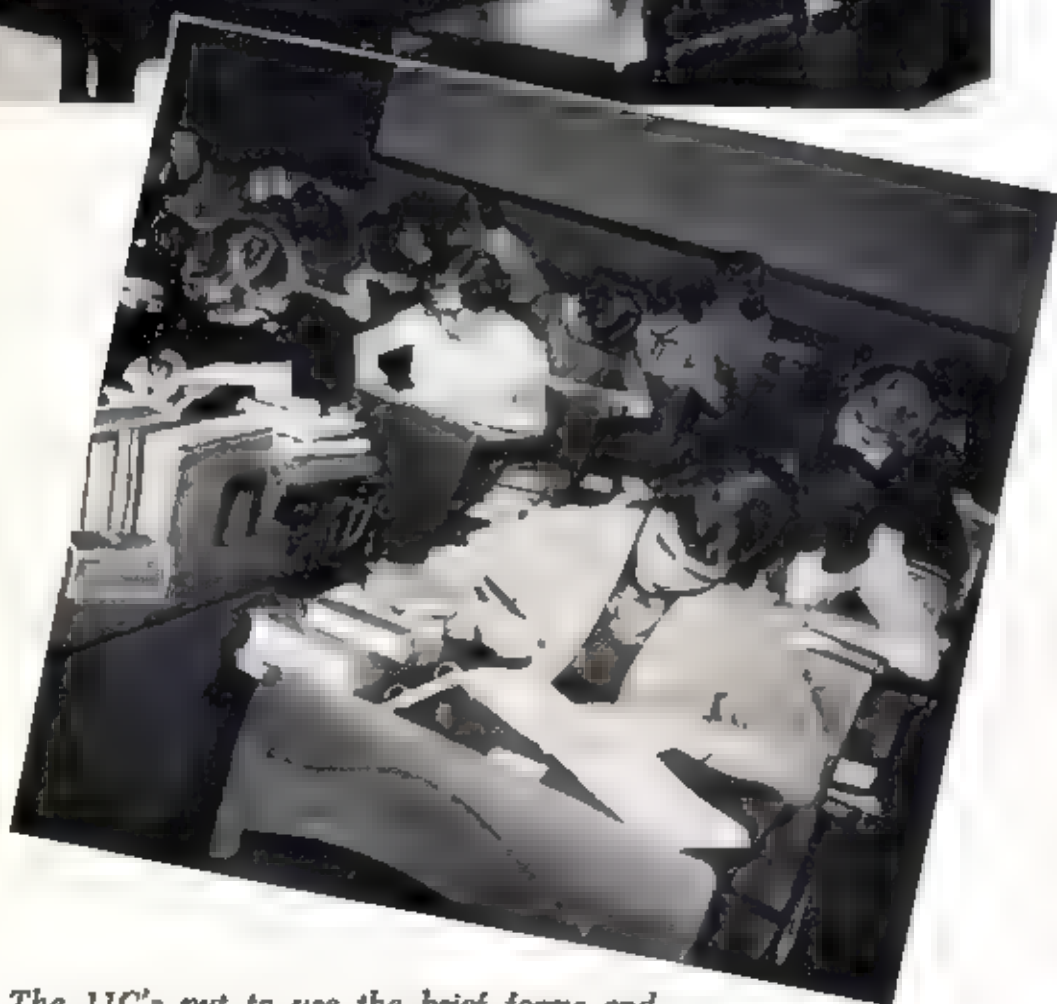

The COMMERCIAL curriculum takes care of those with a yen for business life, beginning as soon after graduation as possible. Two subdivisions—clerical and stenographic—permit those on uncertain terms with shorthand to make a choice. Regardless of aim, in this world of machines, speed and accuracy of fingers as well as of thinking are of primary importance.

RIGHT: Commercial seniors prepare to do a bit of mimeographing. BELOW: Everything is "clear as mud" as these juniors get down to work on their bookkeeping.

From Classroom...

Mrs. Dorothy S. Bowers, B.S., M.A., teaches future office workers the intricacies of shorthand and typing.

The IIC's put to use the brief forms and phrases of shorthand while taking dictation.

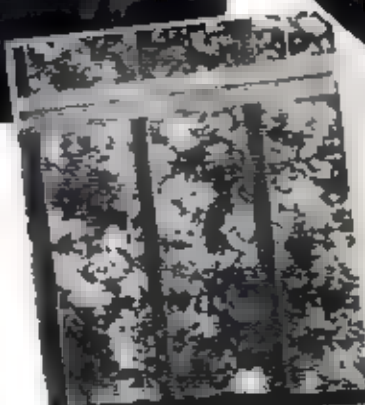

LEFT: The 12C's go through practice drills to warm up for the day's work. RIGHT: These junior girls learn an easy way to add the staggering columns in bookkeeping

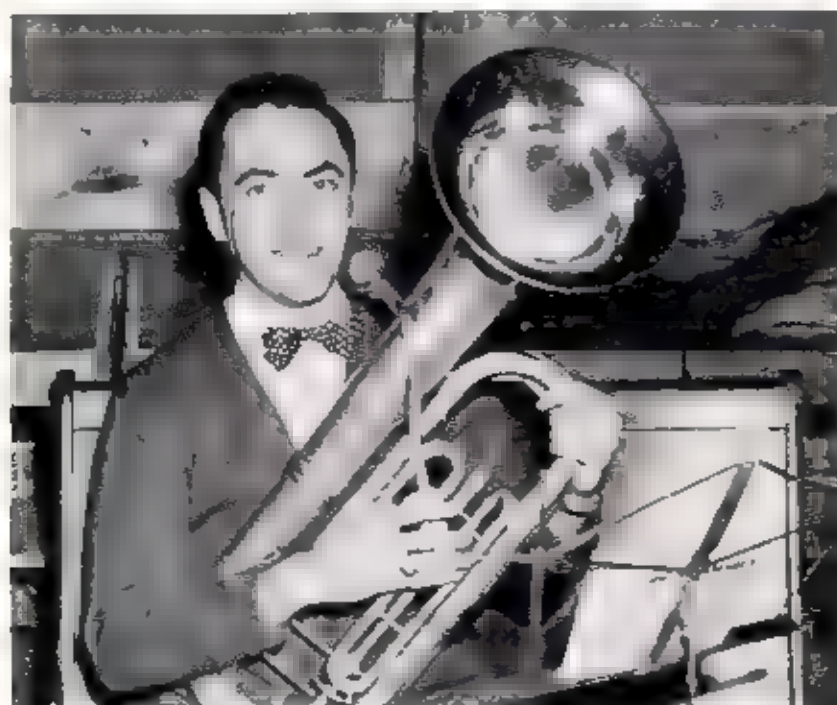

...to Office

As early as ninth grade the commercial students receive some ideas of secretarial work from Miss Myers.

Mr. Richard Winn, B.S., vacationing from office practice, shorthand and typing, attends the rehearsal of the concert band.

Miss Jeanette Espenshade, B.S., whose related hobby is selling, enjoys telling her classes about her many interesting experiences.

The phases of HOME ECONOMICS are offered to girls who are planning to make a career of marriage or, with a few extra academic credits, enter a nursing school. Beginning with the simplest dishes in cooking and hours of practice on elementary stitches, home ec students learn to furnish, decorate, and take care of their future homes in the best spic-and-span way. A new fad in this department, knitting, puts a light on an entirely different subject!

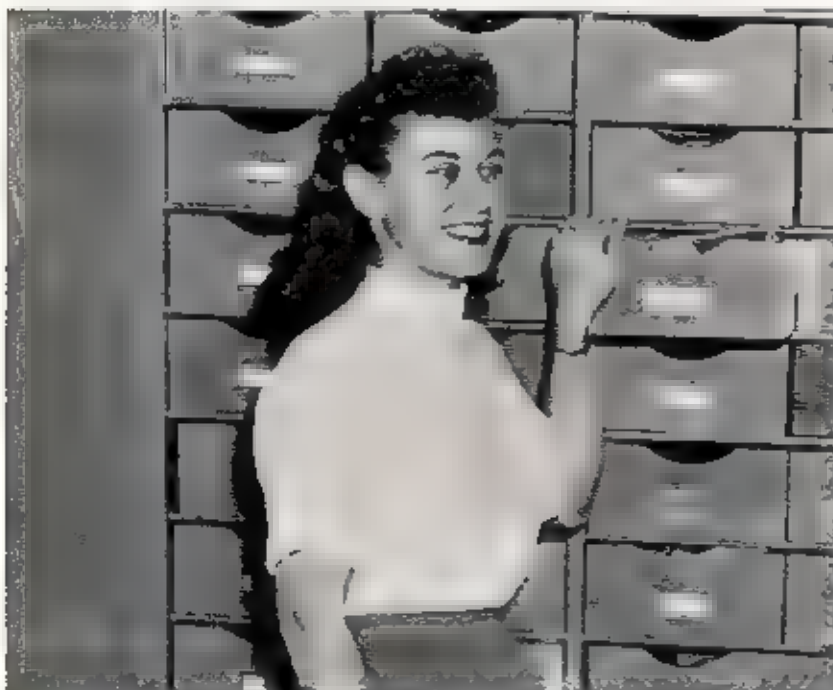

Winners of the local cherry pie baking contest, Vivian Kiser and Ruth Garner, pose with the judges—Mrs. C. Harlacker, Dr. M. H. Welty and Mrs. R. Tschop.

Needle and Spoon

After a long day of cherry pie baking, comes the unpleasant part—cleaning up!

Mrs. Mary Grove, B.S., an alumna of Red Lion, is our food and fashion expert, heading the cafe and costuming plays.

Mrs. Phyllis Fissel, B.S., puts her knitting talents to good use. Her schedule combines home ec and freshman science.

To practical minded boys, the INDUSTRIAL ARTS curriculum offers the chance to develop skills in draftsmanship, printing, and wood, metal and foundry working. In spite of inky hands, skinned fingers, sticky varnish and complicated dimensions, the fellows turn out eye-catching projects of real value. Besides developing manual abilities they try to soak up as much technical knowledge as possible to equip them for positions in tomorrow's industry.

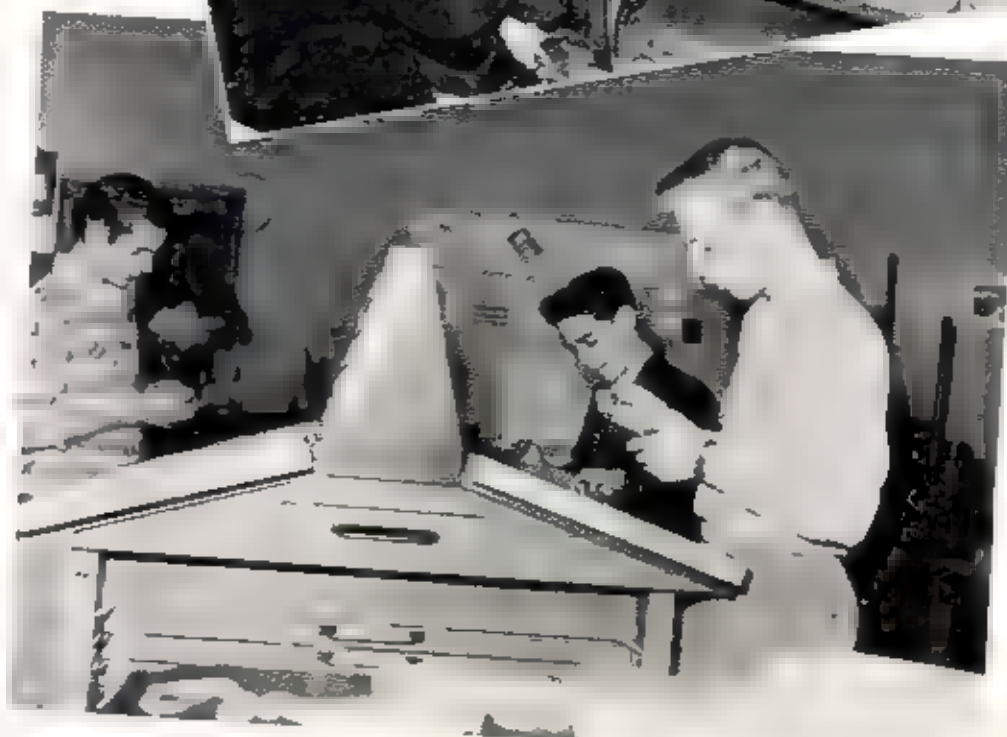

J. Groff tries his hand at shaping a lamp on the lathe

Proud Craftsmen

E. Harrell, M. Henry, H. Greenawalt and M. Geesey set up type in the school print shop.

Mr. Ward Yorks, B.S., M.Ed., puts his O.K. on a newly developed picture to be used for the Lion.

Mr. Dalton Landis, B.S., gives his suggestions to a shop lad faced with a problem in mechanical drawing.

Mrs. Dorothy Adams, B.S., is right at home at the piano, since music classes and vocal groups occupy much of her time.

Reference work, the search for a good book, and magazine reading bring students to the library every hour of the day.

Morning and the photographer find Mr. Robert Surplus, B.S., M.A., music supervisor, plotting an outside marching rehearsal for the band.

The Finer Arts...

Rainy weather brings the band's marching session to the gym.

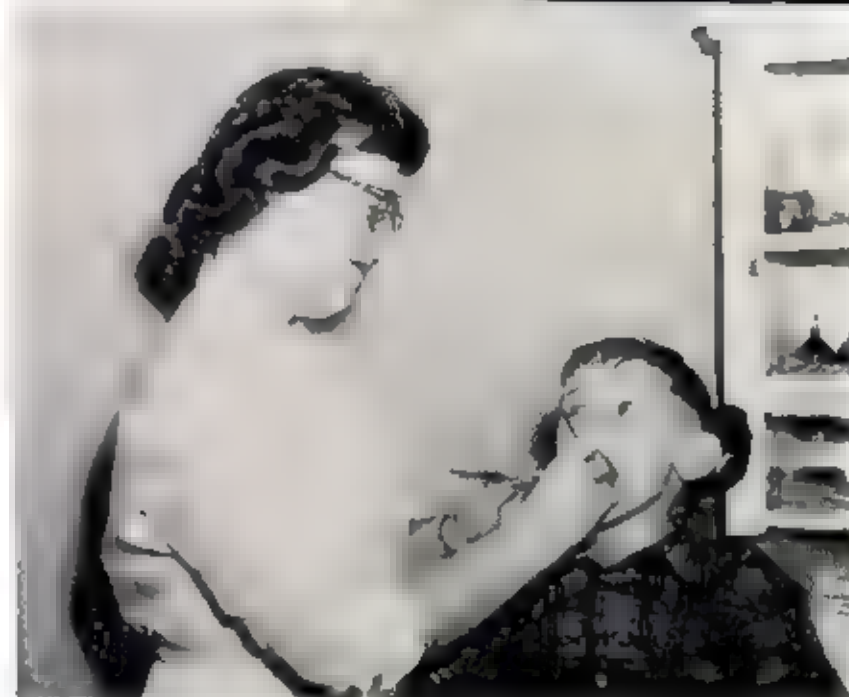

The students come in contact with a few SPECIAL departments, regardless of the course of study. Art and music favor special talents or hobbies, while health and physical education are on schedule for all, three periods per week. Last, but not least, there are the services of librarian, nurse and dental hygienist—all available and obliging when assignments or epidemics strike.

Miss Geraldine Smeltzer, R.N., takes a breather after soothing students' snuffles and upset tummies

Dental hygienist, Miss Ardean Tollinger, is in the midst of her routine check-ups.

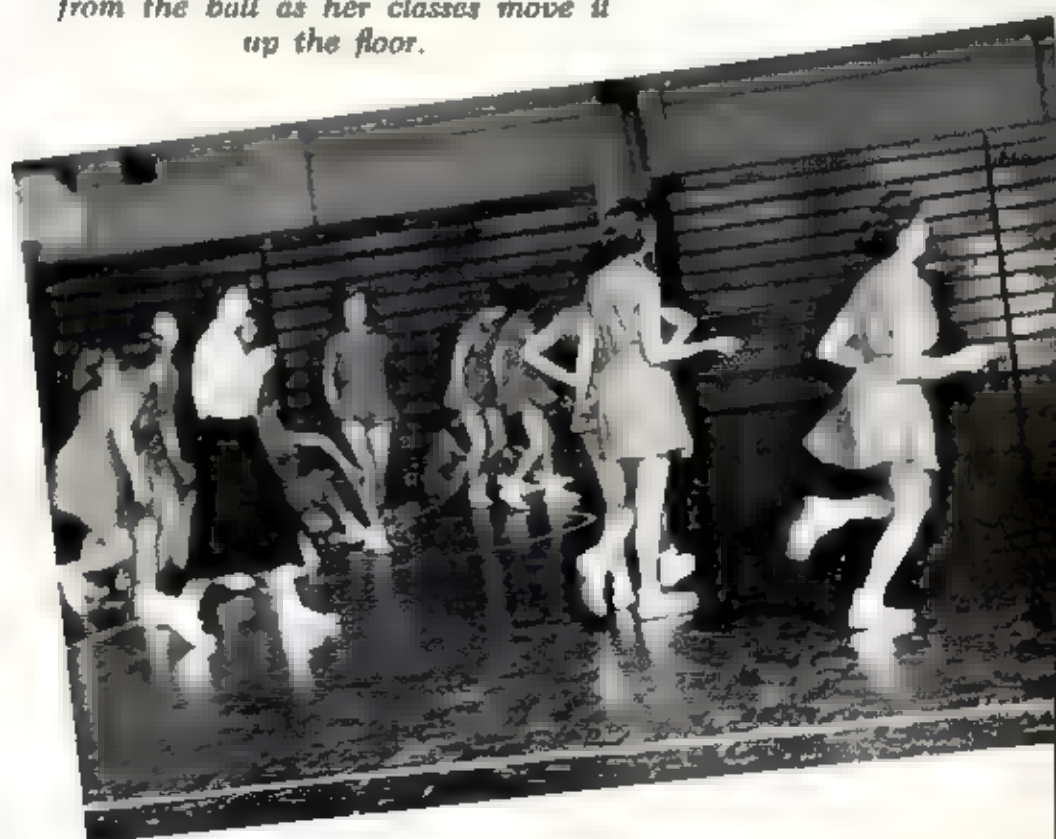

...Conveniences

Mrs. Hilda Shermeyer, B.S., librarian, stops to write out a slip before returning to her typewriter

Hilda Shermeyer

Mrs. Flinchbaugh never takes her eye from the ball as her classes move it up the floor.

Mrs. Sara Barton, B.S., taking over the art department this year, has shared many novel ideas with her students

Another new dance is put into effect with instructions from Mrs. Wanda Flinchbaugh, A.B., M.S., girls physical education instructor.

... Fascinating Sidelines*

TOP: The students find the annual art exhibit very interesting and amusing. BOTTOM: The gym is unusually active as these tarzans give out with a little knowledge of rope climbing for Orientation Day.

Mr. Thomas Yost, B.S., head football coach, doesn't miss a ball snap when his boys are on the field.

A group of faculty members enjoy the "My Dreams Are Getting Better All the Time" course at the Bowers' home . . . the third stop in the "Eat 'n' Run" party.

Judging by the expressions on the faces of Mr. Minnich and Mr. Yost at the football banquet, Mr. Nitchkey must be up to his usual story-telling.

The Lighter Side

Mr. Ziegler and Mrs. Flinchbaugh prove equal to the occasion in this contest of wind.

Faculty members have their fun too, although some of those tests make students wonder . . . there was the "Eat 'n' Run" party, with travel and plenty of good food involved . . . the faculty assembly, a new project this year, and thoroughly enjoyed by participants and audience . . . the annual picnic as guests of the Moores and the Kulpes . . . and a trek to Safe Harbor . . . a cultural diversion provided by Mrs. Conrad, a bookalogue lecturer.

Empty of students and teachers, the high school needs attention even at night. INSET: Horace Krisely, the night shift, is quite at home with his brooms in the lonely halls

The door opens and one of the JANITORS says, "Want your boards washed?"—a regular Friday afternoon ritual. These custodians tackle a wide variety of jobs, from cleaning erasers to fixing a broken window, which just happened to jump out and hit someone's elbow. Round the clock, R. L. H. S. can never be found without the cozy light in the boiler room and the bump of brooms through its halls.

A Knack for Nutrition

When it comes to good food, we have it! The hard-working CAFETERIA CREW is always flying around the school kitchen putting things in and taking things out. Never a dull moment in this room! Preparing hot meals for well over five hundred people a day is a Herculean task which requires lots of raw materials, good equipment and five full time cooks. An hour, which to the students means food and free time, causes plenty of work and headaches for the women in the kitchen.

The cafeteria staff—Mrs. A. Smith, Mrs. G. Smith, Mrs. E. Kunkle, Mrs. A. Kunkle, Mrs. G. Smeltzer—are hard at work preparing lunch for the hungry horde.

Wayne Stump, volunteer KP worker, obliges Nedra Haugh and Shirley Johnson in tray cleaning service.

Activities

As busy as squirrels gathering nuts in the fall are students in the morning activity period. Activities cover every phase of pleasure and service to the school. Of these perhaps the ones best known to our bushy-tailed rascals are the Biology Club which often studies them, and the Red Lion High School Band which serenades them during fall marching practice. This visit indoors will open their eyes to magic, journalism and other interests not usually found in a squirrel's book of facts.

SERVICE clubs work with the intention of helping the school, besides offering good experience to their members. The Student Council solves many stumbling-blocks that crop up during the year. The Safety Patrol, Junior Red Cross, Library Club and brand new Publicity Club do a big job in guarding the youngsters going to and from school, doing countless good turns, helping the librarian keep the bookworms under control and spreading the word about all the extra activities around school.

Student Servants...

Melodies and Violins...

The INSTRUMENTAL MUSIC set-up might be called the evolution of the musician, from the efforts and trials of the junior band and beginners' instrumental classes to the more polished senior band and finally, the goal of all high school bandsmen, All-State Band. Other lines are given plenty of opportunities by the activities of the orchestra and dance band or small groups such as the assembly band and the trumpet trios, which result in lots of fun, experience and good music.

The nineteen weekly instrumental sessions, such as this one, provide valuable training for everyone from beginner to experienced musician.

For the longhairs there is the Orchestra with its every-Thursday practices . . . the weekly hunt for Pat Taylor's flute case . . . the shortage of violin players . . . the acquisition of a new string bass and cello . . . services rendered at junior play and commencement.

Singing for Basses to Coloraturas...

A "school of VOICES" would describe Red Lion very well! Of the five activity periods in a week, three of them find musical groups at work primarily for the annual Night of Music. Orientation day, special programs and extra activities outside the school likewise claim their talents. Participation in the state forensics is a high honor and this heads the list of goals for vocal hopefuls.

Forensic competitors—Bill Workinger, Gloria Myers and Bob Burg—chat for a minute before the contests begin.

The Senior High Chorus enjoys the tops in vocal music with their too short Monday practices . . . the habitual scramble in setting up the chairs . . . those frequent corny wisecracks from the basses and tenors . . . the new rehearsal angle of speaking phrases as well as singing them . . . the hope for one single practice without interruptions.

Curtain Going Up...

DRAMATICS comes into its own when word of a new play is announced. Stage-minded students rush to try-outs, hoping to get a part whether lead or bit. The senior, junior, Christmas and Easter plays are the most important of the school year, and many of their characters are furnished from club membership. Those interested in memorizing pages of speeches and cues and learning to conquer stagefright have their chance. Add to them the unsung heroes of any production—the stagecrew, with their new and different sets to give a play that needed touch.

R. Silar, M. Urey and P. Smith are to W. Grim "The Bachelor's Reveries," in this club skit.

This scene, taken from the club's Christmas program, shows the breakfast table as a center for the children's morning antics.

With a slight chair shortage, the Ruggleses, portrayed in assembly by members of the club, line up for inspection before going calling.

One of the largest groups in the school is the Dramatic Club . . . try-outs necessary for new members . . . the displays of talent from dancing to drama, at the weekly meetings . . . the hours of work spent preparing the productions of the year . . . the variety assembly program featuring "Birds Learn to Fly" and novelty numbers . . . the second annual black-face minstrel show, complete with end men and chorus.

Sports

Whether inter-scholastic, intra-mural, or as a part of physical education, athletics provides a lot of fun and exercise for everyone at R. L. H. S.—squirrels included. From late August, when our four-legged friends begin dodging the cleated hoofs of their football friends, until spring's stray baseballs send them scuttling for shelter, they are very much aware of sports activities in their neighborhood. Sports with a Feminine Flare...

FEMININE SPORTS are one of the chief interests of the girls in Red Lion. The very active Girls Athletic Association offers every major sport to its eighty-plus members and competition between classes is very keen. Equally essential to the high school are the cheerleaders, without whose peppy yells and whirling skirts no basketball or football game would be complete.

Intra-Class Sports...

Students participating in the INTRAMURAL program can be found any noon hour, either in the gym or the park, enjoying an exciting game. This program, providing interest for all, offers team members a chance for a little extra practice and also gives those who are not varsity minded an opportunity to play at their favorite sport.

Underclassmen

Comparing a frisky squirrel to a care-free underclassman is an easy matter, and perhaps a keen observer might even detect a more than casual acquaintance between the two groups. Certainly many peanuts, carefully protected during morning classes, have found their way to Mr. Squirrel who makes it his business to be on hand when students take to the park during the noon hour. Although their boundless energy and enthusiasm, when turned in the wrong direction, sometimes give the teachers new grey hairs, these young students do much toward making Red Lion the cheerful, bustling school that it is.

Seventh grade officers: Ann Lane, treasurer; Darby Eisenhart, secretary; Russel Urey, vice-president; and Lonnie Barnhart, president—pose gladly, since the picture was taken during a math class.

Entering our halls for the first time, the SEVENTH GRADERS are constantly reminded that they are new at this business of high school. Continuous talkers, eaters, and fun hunters, they have caused many a teacher or upper classman to ask himself if he ever acted that way. But they are also the first to catch the spirit of getting on the honor roll, the sports programs, and extra-curricular activities, clubs, assemblies, dances, intramurals and all those little but important projects that pop up during the year. Indeed these students are just as anxious to be a part of the high school program as the school is to have them.

...with Opportunities Galore before Them

The seventh grade, newcomers to R. L. H. S., compose a lively group with social activities a new-found interest, highlighted by their first junior high dance . . . their mysterious pep rally float which never showed up at the parade . . . the presentation of their first high school assembly.

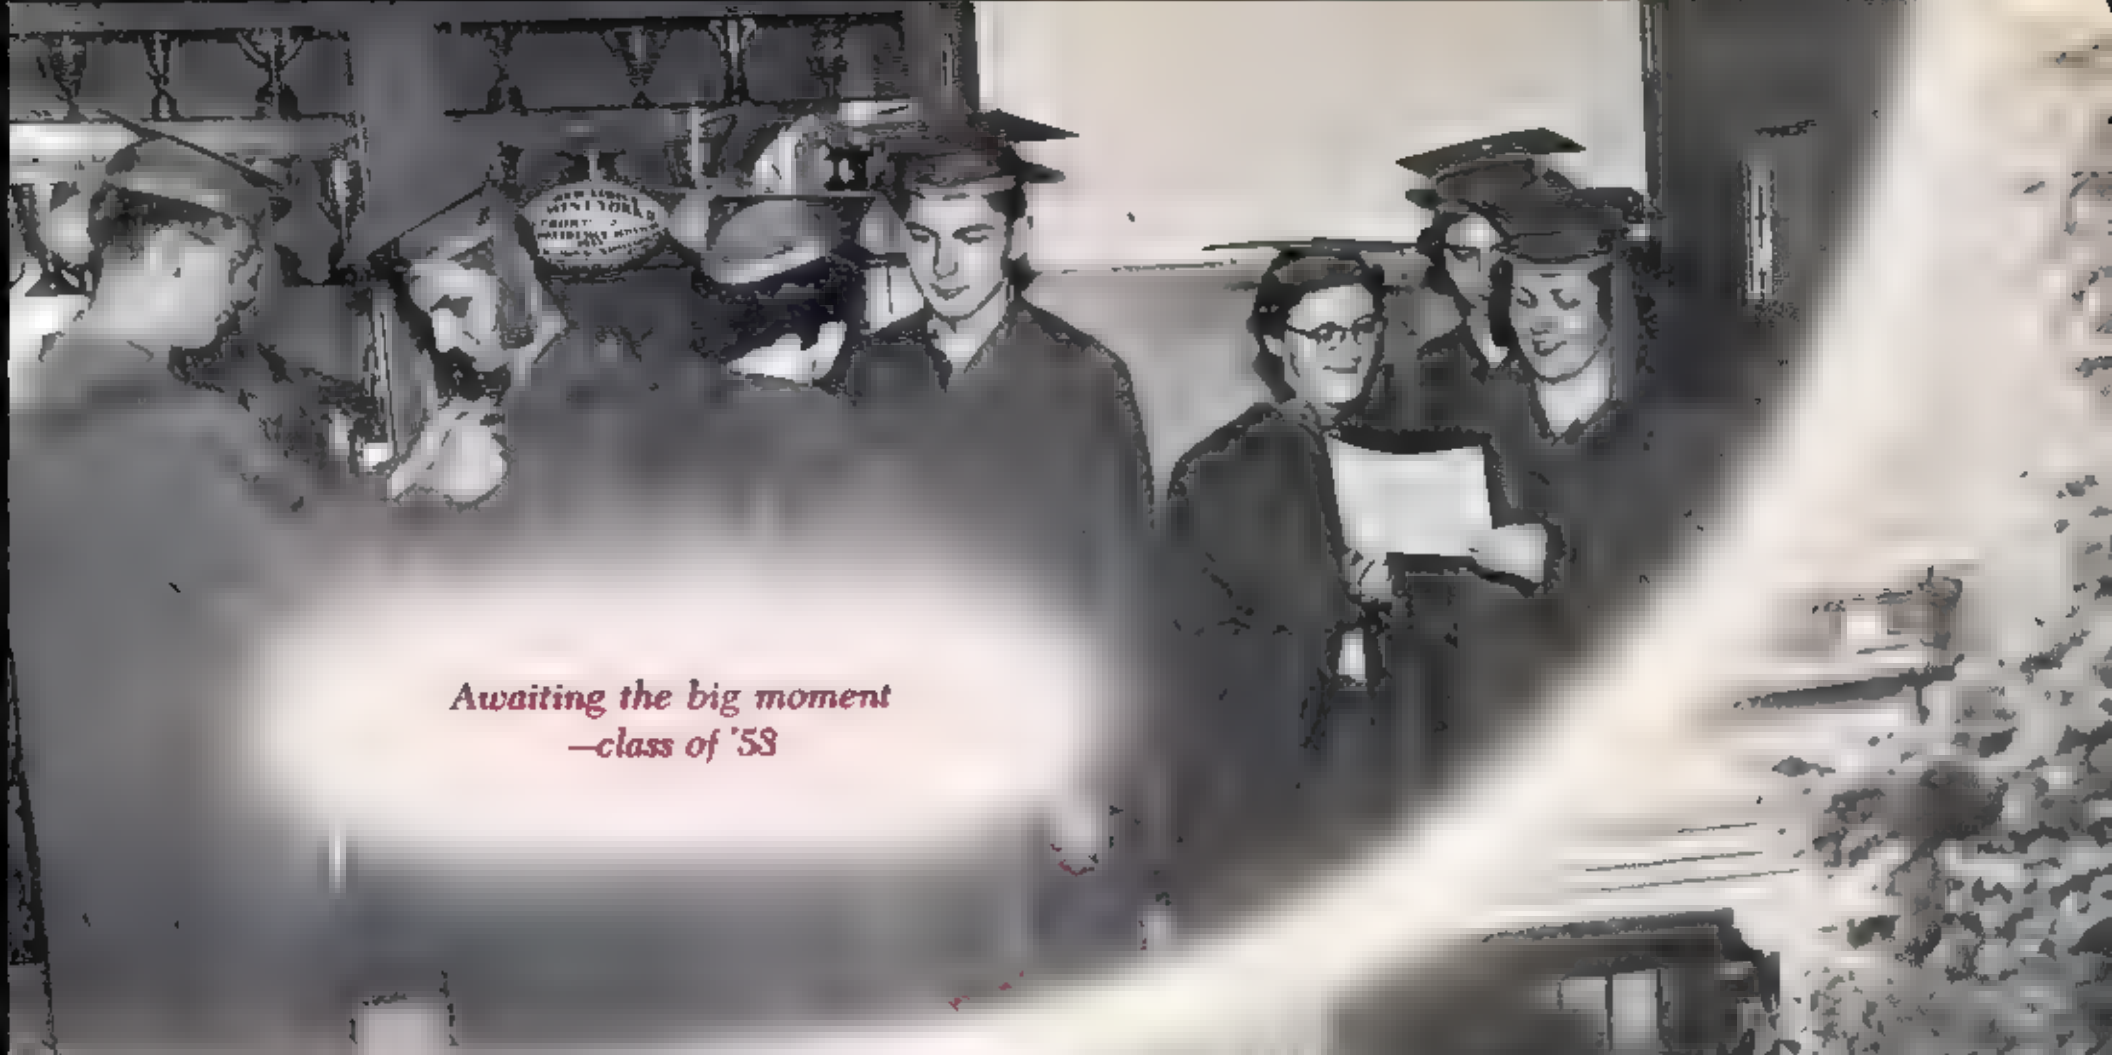

Students of 108 take part in a special program to add to the homeroom festivities.

Seniors

Very busy and a bit nostalgic might be the condition of any senior class during the final months of their higher education, and the one hundred and forty from Red Lion are no different. After four short years of work, fun and companionship, they reluctantly lay aside their happy, carefree lives to assume the responsibilities of adults. As they prepare their long-planned homes and careers and as high school gradually slips into the past, we know they will not forget, among many other memories, the squirrels who remain behind to encourage and amuse the next group of lucky students.

Patrons

There's nothing "squirrely" about our fine friends who have helped make this book a success by their generous financial considerations. As far as yearbooks are concerned, the lack of money is the root of all evil, and their support eases money matters considerably, making possible the use of new ideas and materials in the book. Only this help keeps this project from diving into the red, and our sincere thanks scarcely pays the debt of their interest and co-operation. We hope they may find the results satisfying and worthwhile.

Finis

This brings to a close the record of the final year of the Class of '53 in Red Lion High School, a year filled with vivid experiences soon to become colorful memories. The staff has tried to bring you a "squirrel's-eye view" of our wonderful little school in action, accompanied by the antics of our noisy nutcrackers from across the way. It hopes it has been able to convey to the readers some of the fun, work, and even occasional disappointments of the students whose experiences make up the 1953 LION.
